

The Department of Sociology and Criminology & Law at the University of Florida is inviting applications for a 9-month Assistant Professor, starting August 2018. We seek scholars who conduct research on the relationship of crime to the biophysical environment. Successful applicants will contribute to both of our programs by demonstrable scholarly expertise in one or more of these fields: Conservation Criminology, Green Criminology, Environmental Health, Wildlife Crimes, and Environmental Justice. Applicants who can also offer scholarly contributions to race-ethnicity are preferred. Successful applicants will show evidence of an ability to mentor graduate students and to maintain an excellent record of research, including the potential to obtain extramural funding, commensurate with their career stage.

We are an interdisciplinary department that offers undergraduate and graduate degree programs in both sociology and criminology. The successful candidate will have a Ph.D. upon appointment in Sociology, Criminology or another closely related discipline. The salary is commensurate with qualifications and experience and includes a full benefits package.

All candidates for employment are subject to a pre-employment screening which includes a review of criminal records, reference checks, and verification of education.

The final candidate will be required to provide an official transcript to the hiring department upon hire. A transcript will not be considered "official" if a designation of "Issued to Student" is visible.
